NATIONAL INFRASTRUCTURE SECTOR WELCOMES NEW IA CEO ROMILLY MADEW

The national infrastructure sector welcomes the appointment of Romilly Madew as CEO of Infrastructure Australia, says peak body Infrastructure Partnerships Australia.

“The appointment of Ms Madew will add strength to the independent advice of Infrastructure Australia in what is set to be a major year for infrastructure delivery,” said Infrastructure Partnerships Australia CEO, Adrian Dwyer.

“Ms Madew is a proven facilitator and relationship builder and will play a key role in working with state and territory governments to identify the infrastructure priorities of our major cities, which are undergoing profound urban transformations.

“It will also be important for Ms Madew to continue the delivery of the National Infrastructure Audit to provide Australia with an updated evidence base for infrastructure decision making and the foundation for the next Australian Infrastructure Plan.

“Infrastructure Australia has enjoyed bipartisan support from both sides of the aisle over the years and it will be important that this tradition continues in the lead up to the election,” Mr Dwyer said.

Infrastructure Partnerships Australia is the nation’s peak industry body providing independent policy research focused on excellence in social and economic infrastructure.
