JOHN HOLLAND'S SIMON LEHMAN WINS INAUGURAL FUTURE INFRASTRUCTURE LEADER OF THE YEAR AWARD for 2019

John Holland's Senior Signalling Project Engineer, Simon Lehman has been awarded the inaugural Future Infrastructure Leader of the Year Award at Infrastructure Partnerships Australia's National Infrastructure Awards, in Melbourne tonight.

"Simon represents the best of the infrastructure sector – part of next generation of problem solvers and innovators who share our collective aim to make Australia the global standard for infrastructure," said Infrastructure Partnerships Australia, Chief Executive Adrian Dwyer.

"Simon's profile stood out to the judging panel amongst all the other entries because of his extraordinary commitment to the infrastructure sector.

"Simon has proven to be a major asset and path breaking engineer for the John Holland rail team.

"His on-the-job mentoring of younger team members and his exceptional work at the forefront of infrastructure delivery was exemplary.

"The national infrastructure sector congratulates Simon on being the recipient of the inaugural Future Infrastructure Leader of the Year Award, and thanks him for his constant drive to set the best possible example for other emerging leaders," said Mr Dwyer.

The National Infrastructure Awards are convened by Infrastructure Partnerships Australia each year, recognising excellence in public administration and business across major projects.

The Future Infrastructure Leader Award recognises an emerging professional under the age of 35 who has made an exceptional contribution to the sector. The Future Infrastructure Leader of the Year Award is a new award category for 2019.
