ALEXIS DAVISON FROM MAJOR ROAD PROJECTS VICTORIA WINS WOMEN'S ACHIEVEMENT IN INFRASTRUCTURE AWARD FOR 2019

Director, Program Services & Engineering at Major Road Projects Victoria, Alexis Davison has been recognised for her leadership in the infrastructure sector at the prestigious National Infrastructure Awards, convened by Infrastructure Partnerships Australia in Melbourne tonight.

“The Women’s Achievement in Infrastructure Award recognises a female in the sector who has consistently made a significant contribution to the development, construction or procurement of infrastructure and services,” said Infrastructure Partnerships Australia, Chief Executive Adrian Dwyer.

“Every year, this award attracts several impressive nominees who are making significant contributions to our sector, but it was hard to go past the impact that Alexis has made as an engineer and leader.

“Alexis has had a long and successful career in infrastructure over the last two decades.

“The Judging Panel were particularly impressed by Alexis’ strong leadership and mentorship of other female engineers.

“Alexis has consistently delivered outstanding business cases for Major Road Projects Victoria and has developed an impressive reputation for her innovative thinking and professionalism as a female engineer at the forefront of infrastructure delivery.

“The national infrastructure sector congratulates Alexis on being the recipient of the Women’s Achievement in Infrastructure Award, and thanks her for her continued leadership and the model she sets for everyone in the industry,” said Mr Dwyer.

The National Infrastructure Awards are convened by Infrastructure Partnerships Australia each year, recognising excellence in public administration and business across major projects.
